Gun-toting Mayor Hazel runs amok at Erindale

by Bye

In a strange turn of events, Mayor McCallion went on a rampage through Erindale last week, killing three and maiming dozens, in what has been described as "the McCallion massacre".

The Mississauga Mayor was visiting Desmond Morton, Erindale Principal, to discuss her plans to change Erindale College into the University of Mississauga, when a number of autograph seekers rushed the Mayor. They apparently were screaming for Mrs. McCallion to sign the posters from her role as Momma in the movie 'Throw Momma from the Train' when she pulled her gun and started firing.

Teaching Assistants, now picketing in front of the South Building, were the first to go. McCallion could be heard screaming "Dental Plan? I'll give you a dental plan - eat hot fillings!" Three TAs were injured, but the question begs itself, will they get workman's compensation? The tire tracks on their faces suggest an on the job injury, but almost every student at Erindale is claiming responsibility.

One student, Mike Lacka, who wished to remain anonymous and have his name in the paper, said "Who cares? I was late for class and they were in my way. I even got fifty bonus points for taking out more than three."

Peter Silcox, former Dean of Student Services and now Chief Janitor of the Crossroads Building, attempted to contact Campus Police at Tim Horton's immediately. However the Campus Police took over half an hour to respond to the call. One officer was quoted as saying, "We were waiting for the Boston Creams to come out - they said they would be ready in ten minutes."

Anyhow, the Mayor then reloaded while yelling "Pritchard! Where are you Pritchard? This is my town, and this is my University! I'll give Iggy Kaneff some reason to throw some dirt!" The real problem began however, when the Erindale shuttle bus then pulled in.

Hazel then jumped aboard and demanded that the driver take her downtown to Pritchard's Office. The bus driver later told medium II what happened. "I said to her 'Lady, if you want to take the bus ya gotta pay - two orange tickets, or one pink.' I didn't care if she was holding a gun, she's gotta pay like everyone else."

After the Mayor bought her tickets at the Info Booth, she came back to the bus and shot all the St. George students. "Erindale students rule!" she screamed as the bus beetled down to St. George.

As usual, the shuttle bus broke down on the way there, stranding the Mayor near that formerly awesome bump on the Gardiner Expressway that the city neutered. Visions of the Los Angeles 'Freeway Shooter' came to mind, as the Mayor sprayed hot lead into passing traffic until one motorist stopped and gave her a lift.

Pritchard's office was the scene of the final confrontation, as the University of Toronto President and a swat team waited for McCallion. Unfortunately, picketing TAs would not move from the front of Pritchard's office. One TA commented, "It's a ploy to get us to leave. I'm not moving." Again unfortunately, these were the teaching assistant's last words, as Hazel appeared and cleared a path to the office.

Fortunately, after successful dealings with Iraqi arms dealers, Pritchard had a number of Scud missiles on hand. Unfortunately, Mississauga's wide and expensive tax base supported the funding for a number of Patriot missiles, and they shot down Pritchard's Scuds somewhere in the skies above Hart House.

Fortunately (?), Pritchard had secretly designed a back-door secret passage-like tunnel, and escaped unscathed from the incident. The Mayor's last heard words, spoken in a Schwartzenegger type fashion were apparently "I'll be back."

HIRING SCANDAL:
Lloyd denies wrongdoing

The Inquisitor has learned of some strange goings-on. It seems that ECSU President-elect Lloyd Aning is already "interviewing" applicants for the various paid positions that ECSU has available in the coming school year. We spared no expense to bring you photographic PROOF of this Lloyd's lust! Using a microscopic camera, hidden in a half eaten pizza which was placed on the disused ECSU photocopiers, the following images were recorded. Aning has denied any wrong doing in the case. When told of the photographs he claimed that although he used the ECSU office for the torrid tryst, he only did so because, "motels are so expensive these days."

President-Elect Lloyd Aning "frolics" with a potential ECSU employee.

ECSU bankrupt!

Strange stone tablets reveal divine reasons for ECSU's incompetency

The following is a investigative report done by the crack (cracked?) Inquisitor news staff into the fiscal and financial and even the monetary responsibilities of our beloved ECSU Council. So there.

by The Way

In a not so strange turn of events, the ECSU cashbox has been found with no cash or negotiables. Sources close to the newspaper have revealed that medium II has assumed the fiscal responsibilities of the scandalous student union in a hostile take over bid. The take over included an armed insurrection sponsored in part by the militant Hunters Club, whose membership requirement involved ownership of a firearm and a paid membership to the right wing National Rifle Association.

"After strenuous deliberation", said a friend that is very close to the newspaper Editor named Norman "Politically Correct" Saunders told medium II, "we decided that we were wasting entirely too much time, ink and paper covering the bumbling ineptitude of the Erindale Student Union." The latter two points were considered to have environmental importance thus the take over was claimed to have been done in the name of the greater good.

The latest scandal, that was supposed to have forced the take over, was the embezzlement of the student funds by Mike Olah who claimed to need the money for his plan to woo Mr. Arsenault, the infamous former ECSU president. Mike was heard commenting that he wanted to, "Do the Bart Man". medium II, said it was important that move be made in order to up hold morality and "establish a new Erindalian order." The mob that chanted "Death to ECSU", congregated outside the Crossroads building, cheered when a "new era in student unions" was announced. The crowd then proceeded to shout and dance in the street at the news of five cent photocopies.

A curious set of stone tablets were found in the ECSU offices. They read as follows:

The ECSU COMMANDMENTS

1) Thou shalt have no other Goof before me but the lord Bart.
2) Thou shalt not partake of money making ventures.
3) Thou shalt make a total idiot of thyself at any given opportunity.
4) Delegate responsibility as doth see fit to optimise maximum inefficiency.
5) Thou shalt lie, or moreover, thou shalt not tell the truth.
6) Thou shalt wander lost in the fiscal wilderness until hell doth freezeth over.
7) Thou shalt hold graven images of medium II with the utmost contempt.
8) Thou shalt not hold any events that more than three students shall partake in.
9) Thou shalt not allow Radio Erindale to operate with reasonable, or even moderate autonomy.
10) Thou shalt allow incompetence to be the rule.

Bart Arsenault was heard muttering, "I brought them down from the mountain."One can only wonder about what the proto-fascist reign of medium II will do for Erindale.

ECSU's Safety Deposit box, closed off by their creditor from the Bank of Calgary, was all the evidence the Inquisitor needed to discover ECSU's "secret shame".

medium II busted!

Administration exclaims, "We finally got those bastards!"

by Simon Flemingwood
The Eternal News Writer

In a strange turn of events, medium II, the Erindale campus newspaper and once profitable megacorporation was raided and seized by the Campus Police last weekend.

The Meter Maids swarmed medium II around 11:50 p.m., siren (singular) blaring, and then proceeded to ticket all the cars in the Crossroads Building parking lot.

Following this, the police stormed medium II. "We received a hot tip that there were donuts in here, but when we got in we saw all that money and the hundreds of tubes of cocaine!"

The eight-minute undercover investigation that included administration and ECSU found over $60,000 plus twelve tins containing a "whitish substance definitely resembling cocaine."

The Editor-in-Chief, Norman Saunders was arrested immediately and charged with drug trafficking. "We always knew that guy from the Turks & Caicos Islands was going home for the summer, and then came back with even more casual pants and shirts. We put two and two together and got three, and then realized where medium II was getting all their profit." Led by Constable "Conan" Cervoni, the police then proceeded to "beat the crap out of that Norman dude."

Bud Taggart, Officer of the Big Chiefs of Administration, commented on the raid. "I thought, how can they be making all that money? I knew something had to be fishy. I mean the College is losing money, so it's our responsibility to make sure that all the student organizations do as well. We've done a lot with ECSU, but we weren't able to get medium II until now."

This shot is not of Campus Police as they were unable to leave Country Style Donuts in time for the photo. The Administrators of the College were more than happy to seize medium II's assets.

medium II flew to Alcatraz to talk with the former Editor-in-Chief Saunders. "Those fucking morons! I'm telling you, it was coffee whitener! Twelve tins of fucking coffee whitener. They ran out in their own office and they fucking came and took ours!"

Saunders also responded to the illegal funds allegation. "Just cause we're the only people making money at this goddamn university, they suspect something! U of T Internal Auditing tried to get us, but we fixed them good. Ya, *real*good." Saunders refused to clarify his statement, but mumbled something about "a really profitable tax return."

Desmond Morton, Erindale Head Honcho, refused to comment, but witnesses really really close to the source claim "he hasn't stopped smiling for over two days."

Interesting Facts

EXCITING PSYCHOLOGY LESSONS

Through a printing error, several chapters of a sexually explicit work wound up in a first-year psychology text book being used at Erindale. Until the discovery was made, chapter 4 of the book instructed students on the facets of "modern prostitution" and how girls should achieve the fun they require without the companionship of a male.

Studies conducted in November by the Inquisitor have shown that Rez students are far more sexually satisfied than in previous years. In addition, several houses are now catering to those with a limited imagination.

PRESIDENT-ELECT PLANS TO RENOVATE

President-elect of ECSU, Lloyd Aning, says that he wants his office to be refurnished next year. Mr. Aning said that the office is currently a pig stye.

Aning proposes to include a private washroom, a pool, and a hand-carved oak desk in the new office. Initial projections place renovations at $120, 000. Aning said that if Prichard could spend $200, 000 on his office and Lavelle spent $80, 000 on his that there is no reason why he shouldn't be able to spend $120, 000 improving his.

Any objection, Aning concluded, would only be voiced because he is black.

CASE GOES BANKRUPT

The President of the Commerce Association of Students at Erindale (CASE) was fired last week Thursday because he squandered the funds. President Donald Trump invested all the money in penny stocks that dwindled to a fraction of their purchase price.

25% WAS FAIR

Simon Flemingwood, a Seventh-year Art and Art History student at Erindale said that the Election Committee was right to remove 25% of Aning's votes. Flemingwood said that he and all his friends voted for Aning because they saw his posters on the bulletin board near the South Building parking lot.

SICK MAYOR

When asked why she shot so many T.A.s Mayor Hazel said that she was held up on Mississauga Rd. "once too much".

EDITORIAL

A more exciting alternative

Ball hockey has been banned by the University of Toronto's Governing Council. In a prepared statement concerning the ban, governing council president Frank O'Brien said, "ah..er..ah..er.."

In an attempt to save the league, ball hockey guru Dave "the human vegematic" Cassar has put forth a possible solution to the situation. "What is missing from this game is the sheer threat of physical violence that was present during the mid-seventies in the N.H.L. My plan will not only increase the level of player violence but also involve the spectators," Cassar added. Instead of winning a game by outscoring the other team the new rule is: the team with the last person standing wins. Here are some of the major changes for the new game, "Brawlhockey":

1) Forbid all wooden and plastic sticks; replace them with jagged-edged steel pipes with steel blades

2) allow each team to play twenty players at a time as well as any of their family members

3) take the whistles away from referees and take away all their power (according to Cassar, "Anarchy must reign.")

4) butt-ending, charging, fighting, elbowing, tripping are acts that give your team points. If you slash and break your steel pipe stick on an opposing player your team is awarded five points.

5) fans will be given shot-puts to throw at players they deem not putting forth a good effort. Fans will be given three or four shot-puts when they enter. Fans get points for knocking players out of the game.

6) beer and liquor will be served to all those in the gym, including players, at bargain prices.

7) any players or fans not conforming to these rules will face the following punishments: i) watch hours of TSN's real life, real plastic sports telecasts; ii) listen to Howie Meeker for a whole hockey telecast; iii) watch any CBC produced t.v. show or movie.

A new eighteen thousand seat arena will be built inside the South Building. "Who needs classrooms and an education when you can watch entertainment of this sort," added Steve Smith, who refused to be identified. "The game hasn't been this entertaining since the 70s Flyers played. Bob "Hound Dog" Kelly fought three generations of the Jones family in the stands during the second intermission; that is sports entertainment," Cassar added, "..sure there are difficulties..but look at the money this league could generate...remember morals and ethics must be pushed aside when there is money to be made."

Who's selling brawlhockey tickets? Who needs brawlhockey tickets?

Student takes it all off to win contest!

by Low Sell High

In a radical departure from the staid, conservative outlook the University usually adopts, the Administration approved an anything goes Talent Contest at the Blind Duck. The contest was held on February 29th, and featured a wide array of Erindale performers. In all there were 627 entrants but due to time restrictions the line-up was pared down to only 241.

After a highly entertaining evening, the elite panel of 69 unqualified judges narrowed the field down to a select group of 17 winners. Head Judge Norman "Colonel" "Bob" Saunders was heard saying, "I tried to keep an open mind towards all the acts, but I was really only interested in seeing nudity. Sex was the deciding factor in my decision." To ensure that the other judges agreed with his choice Saunders threatened to write a scathing editorial about them all in the next edition of the Erindale Inquisitor if they didn't follow his lead.

Unfortunately this sent the rest of the judges into convulsions of laughter, and the show had to be delayed while they calmed down. When things got going again the panel decided upon five acts as the recipients of the BD award. Speculation has raged long and hard over what exactly the BD stands for however it has been narrowed down to two likely options; 1) Bigus Dickus, in honor of Saunders' favorite film, The Life of Brian, and 2) Breasty Divine, in honor of Saunders' favorite musician and, uh, actually it's still undecided what else Divine was.

And so here then are the victors. The fourth runner-up was Mike Hunt, a creative little guy who did Mr. Bill impersonations so well that the end of his show came only when the shark he was impersonating ate him. The third runner-up was Chuck Roast, a weight lifter who juggled. He started with rubber balls but quickly moved on to raccoons, until 7 members of the audience protested, and, in an attempt to give Chuck a fair chance, volunteered themselves as substitutes. Mr. Roast agreed and promptly commenced juggling them.

The second runner-up, I.P. Nightly, displayed her musical talents by strapping tiny cymbals all over her body and doing the worm on stage. Among the selections she did for us were Greensleeves, The Ace of Spades, Purple Haze, and How Do You Solve A Problem Like Maria. Whu Flung Pou was selected as the first runner-up on the basis of his talent for drinking milk and snorting it through his nose while riding a unicycle blindfolded through a maze of disarmed Iraqui land mines.

However, the coup-de-grace was most certainly Titania Foxx, whose strip tease act was deemed titillating enough to win first prize. Ms. Foxx was overheard commenting "I just hope my professors are here tonight, because I've been bending over backwards to get good grades this year."

Among the first of the crowd to rush the stage were Erindale head honchos Budd Tagert and Petr Silkoxx. When asked about their actions they replied that "we merely wanted to verify this students address and phone number for the Registrar's records." They were, however, unable to satisfactorily explain why Ms. Foxx was writing her measurements down on cocktail napkins for them. →

The contest would have been considered a huge success by all standards if not for the barrage of letters, the picketing, the bomb threats, the kidnappings, the TV and radio appearances, the newspaper stories, the billboard campaign, and the skywriting done by the various women's groups on campus.

EKSU president Bartt Arrsenow was sympathetic to the complaints, and told an Inquisitor reporter that he would look into the matter. Moments later he was seen driving off with the victorious stripper shouting "Really, We're just going to talk. I'm going to show her the error of her ways. The whips and chains aren't mine, and I can't even count up to 69." Even the staff photographer found himself under her spell as he was unable to focus - on taking pictures that is.

First prize in the 'Anything GoesErindale Talent Contest' went to this student who wowed judges with her creative dancing.

National Ballet has new agenda

by Line

The National Ballet of Canada has decided upon a startling new course of action. In a press conferance attended by members of the press from every known country, including a few intergalactic representatives, National Ballet spokesperson Karen Kayne revealed that due to waning interest, all future productions by the National Ballet will be in the form of lacrosse games played on ice.

In an attempt to cash in on the popularity of ice hockey in Canada while mixing in Canada's official National sport and the beauty of ballet and opera, they have decided to create a pastime called La Ballet. Kayne told reporters "we plan to maintain the high standards of gracefullness and enjoyment the ballet has always provided by only using players who are willing to take figure skating lessons." Then in an apparent contradiction she said "we figure the way to Canadians hearts is through sheer violence so there are minimum height and weight restrictions to get into our company. Each player must be at least 6'2", 220lbs., and be willing to draw blood with his lacrosse stick. In this way we can be sure of good attendance.

Among the big names the National Ballet has recruited so far are Norman 'Bob' Saunders, Dave 'The Hammer' Schultz, Richard 'Jaws' Kiel, Kareem Abdul Jabbar, and André the Giant. Rumours are flying that Bo Jackson is set to sign a multi-year contract worth well over $793 million. However, the biggest draw is sure to be Kayne herself. The star of such productions as Swan Lake, Kayne is on a steroid program in an effort to reach her playing weight of 285lbs. by the season opener on April 1st, 1992.

The rules of the game are simple. Each team plays with eighteen players in an arena with an ice surface one half the size of a standard hockey rink, and attempts to score the most goals while knocking out the most opponents while constantly pirouetting while singing opera songs. Goals are also given for singing La Boheme in its entirety.

Career Centre Coup!

After years of frustration at not being able to provide jobs for all the students, the Career Centre has taken over the University grounds, and are offering students the administration's jobs. General Eve Paley stated " people have only been asking for positions on ECSU. After all,where else can you get your tuition paid for doing nothing." Contact Norman 'Colonel' Saunders for info.

SUPERSTAR IMPREGNATED BY ALIENS IN HICKVILLE, ONT.

by Sky Hye

Reports from Wawa, Ontario cite a bizarre spaceship touching down in their town square, kidnapping superstar Magic Johnson, who was in Wawa promoting his new novel "What to do with Big Hands."

Sources say the ship, which was manned by strange creatures 12 feet in height and having 10 hands, returned Johnson 2 days later, apparently unharmed. Johnson was somewhat speechless about the whole ordeal: "It was, uh, uh, big creature, oh, ugh uh, fluids, uh."

Johnson decided to stay in Wawa to relax after the event. Four weeks later he was rushed to the hospital after gaining 180 pounds and experiencing constant pains in his abdomen, which he described as "something like if someone was dribbling on the inside of your stomach." The highly skilled Wawa medical staff decided to operate on the basketball legend, cutting open his abdomen and delivering a baby-like creature.

Johnson's baby weighed in at 170 pounds. The babe was 10 feet tall and had eight large hands. He is being called "the basketball machine of the 90's," and is predicted to be on the courts as soon as his father is released from the hospital. The Charlotte Bees, the NBA's leading force have signed the yet unnamed basketball icon to a 90 year contract, as his lifespan is judged at 120 years.

The nursing staff at Wawa General Hospital is experiencing much aggravation with the new baby. The head nurse was quoted as saying "He won't take his bottle and drink the baby formula [the father decided breast feeding was not a viable option], he constantly runs the hallways with at least 16 basketballs, and his hands are just everywhere when they're not on his balls!" Letters and presents (mostly basketballs) have been pouring in, and the Wawa postal workers have had to work 6 hours a day to keep up with the work load.

Johnson's doctors predict that he will be playing basketball again within 3 or 4 weeks, as all is going well. They have still not been able to scientifically explain this bizarre situation, or the sudden flooding of the town by other notorious sports celebs such as Bo Jackson, Ben Johnson and Wayne Gretzky.

Erindale Pond Sucks up surfers

by Fish E.

Two student windsurfers windsurfing on the Erindale Pond have mysteriously gone missing. Crack news reporter and waterpolo superstar Charlie Tuna was there to investigate. "There has been a strange turn of events, not unlike those that have occured in the Bermuda Triangle." No progress has been made in the search for the students, and many people are expressing concerns about their education: "What if my prof gets sucked in?" The pond has been cordened off and police have been posted at strategic places around the area. (the real police; campus police could not be lured away from Tim Hortons due to the 2-for-1 special they have on). Members of the Pond Scum waterpolo team have been taken in for questioning.

Women have balls

Huge hoards of angry women crowded the meeting place yesterday in protest of the oppression and supression and frustration that they have been experiencing at Erindale. They have been unable to get what they want and are demanding more! Among their demands are condom machines in the library, virile men on campus, shirts vs. skins men's ice hockey games and reasonable times to play women's ball hockey. Not at 5am in the morning. Not at 11:30pm at night. During the school day. These seething women threatened to take over the administrative offices with their sticks and nets, and play there if necessary. And they did find it necessary. And they saw that it was good. And it was good. After the highly physical game in the offices was over, one member of the administration had this to say about the incident: "Mmmphph gurgh mmm uuungnhgh."

It is not clear what he meant by this, as he had a ball in his mouth.

The Power of Positive Samurai

by Finn Lovsted

In a fifity-fifty life or death crisis, simply settle it by choosing immediate death.

Hagakure is full of such encouraging and uplifting advice on the way a samurai warrior should conduct himself and on how he should think.

The book, written in the early 18th century, became the basis of conduct for samurai and was popular again among Japanese kamikazee and soldiers in this century.

Jocho Yamamoto, its author, was a ronin, specifically, a lordless samurai. His lord had died a natural death and had set his samurai retainers free in his will.

Forbidden to commit suicide by the will, Yamamoto lived as a hermit "hidden among the leaves," lecturing on what he thought was the decay of samurai morality. The title Hagakure literally means "hidden among the leaves." A disciple of Yamamoto took notes and handed down the eleven volumes available today.

Essentially, Hagakure's core is the first two volumes, where Yamamoto explained "forty-eight vital principles" of samurai life, and offered anecdotes about samurai life illustrating the principles in action.

One of the recurring themes of Hagakure is that to be a good samurai, one must not hesitate in one's actions. Yamamoto praises spontaneity, extremism, energy, vitality.

LIVING A FULLER LIFE THROUGH DEATH

• Lord Naoshige said, 'The Way of the Samurai is a mania for death. Sometimes ten men cannot topple a man with such conviction.' One cannot accomplish feats of greatness in a normal frame of mind. One must turn fanatic and develop a mania for dying.

• One begins each day in quiet meditation, imagining one's final hour and various ways of dying - by bow and arrow, gun, spear, cut down by the sword, swallowed up by the sea, jumping into a fire, being struck by lightning, crushed in an earthquake, falling off a cliff, death from illness, sudden death - and begins the day by dying.

THE PROPER ATTITUDE

• Human life lasts but an instant. One should spend it doing what one pleases. In this world fleeting as a dream, to live in misery doing only what one dislikes is foolishness. Since this may prove harmful if misinterpreted, it is a trade secret I have decided not to pass on to young people. I like to sleep. In response to conditions in the present world, I think I shall stay at home and sleep.

• There is something called the 'rainstorm attitude'. When caught in a sudden shower, one may determine not to get drenched, running as fast as one can or trying to thread one's way under the eaves of houses along the way - but one gets wet nonetheless. If from the outset one is mentally prepared to get wet, one is not the least discomfited when it actually happens. Such an attitude is beneficial in all situations.

APPEARANCES

• A true samurai must never seem to flag or lose heart. He must push on courageously as though sure to come out on top. Otherwise he is utterly useless. Here is the secret of encouraging a friend in trouble.

• Sometimes a samurai does not watch his tongue and inadvertently makes a remark such as, 'If that happens, let's run for our lives,' 'How terrifying,' or 'Ouch'. Such words must never pass one's lips, not in jest, nor in fun, nor asleep, nor by accident, not in any context whatsoever.

• One should always be equipped with rouge and powder. Sometimes it may happen when waking up with a hangover that one's colour is bad. At such times one should take out one's rouge and apply it.

LOVE

• The ultimate love I believe to be secret love. Once shared, love shrinks in stature. To pine away for love all one's years, to die of love without uttering the beloved's name, this is the true meaning of love.

HOW TO FAIL

• In a debate or a dispute of some sort, sometimes by losing quickly one loses splendidly. The same phenomenon may be seen in sumo wrestling. If in absolute determination to win one resorts to cheating, one is worse than a loser. One is both dirty and a loser at the same time.

• When undertaking a great feat, do not worry about minor failures. A man who accomplishes great feats must have his faults.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS

• Make up your mind within the space of seven breaths. It is extremely hard to make decisions when one is flustered. But if without worrying over minor issues one approaches the problem with a razor-sharp mind, one will always reach a decision within the space of seven breaths. Consider the problem calmly and with simple determination

• A calculating man is a coward. I say this because calculations all have to do with profit and loss, and such a person is therefore constantly preoccupied with profit and loss. To die is a loss, to live a gain, and so one decides not to die. Therefore one is a coward. Similarly a man of education camouflages with his intelligence and eloquence the cowardice or greed that is his true nature.

THINGS TO REMEMBER

• If you chase two rabbits, you will miss them both.

• Nice guys finish last. Human beings must be overflowing with vitality.

• Stumble and fall seven times, bounce back eight times.

3. Making the Most of Your Food Dollar

In order to make the most of each food dollar and at the same time enjoy nutritious, appetizing meals, follow these simple guidelines:

- When shopping, plan ahead and organize buying according to needs and supplies on hand; buy in amounts that can be used before quality deteriorates. Check "best before" dates as a guide to storage life.
- Shop in person, when produce is fresh and stores are not crowded. Shop when you have plenty of time and with a full stomach.
- Read labels carefully. For graded items, choose the grade that suits the purpose. Consider cost per unit and cost per serving when deciding on the best buy. The largest size may not be the most economical if it is going to spoil before being used.
- Keep an "emergency" shelf stocked with non-perishable and staple items, to avoid unnecessary trips to the store and to have on hand for unexpected needs. Use and replace these items every few months.
- When shopping, pick up refrigerated and frozen items last to limit exposure to warmer temperatures.
- Shop no more than once a week, if possible, to limit impulse buying. "Extras" can be expensive.
